Etched in Culinary History

By now, cooking aficionados worldwide are familiar with the Microplane® story: A housewife commandeers one of her husband's favorite woodworking tools and discovers it effortlessly produces the lightest, most wonderful orange zest she could have ever imagined. Next, after much consumer input and understanding of the challenges chefs face in the kitchen, an entire new product line of graters was introduced. Since that time, Microplane graters have distinguished themselves from other graters by using that signature chemical process to create ultra-sharp cutting edges. Unlike stamped graters, they effortlessly cut through hard and soft foods without tearing or shredding with blades made in the USA.

CLASSIC SERIES

A true American original, the Classic Series represents the graters that made Microplane a must-have amongst professional chefs and cooking enthusiasts.

Each feature the company's iconic long and narrow, rasp-style design that originated in the woodshop.

Use them to zest citrus or grate hard cheese and ginger.

When To Retire Your Rasp-Style Grater

You're trying to whip up a quick stir-fry, but grating the amount of ginger called for in the recipe is taking forever. It's possible that your razor grater has finally lost its edge! Though they're impressively sharp when new, the teeth of even our favorite rasp-style graters can dull over time. To determine whether it's time to replace your tool, grab a lemon (try to find a really busy-looking one) and run your grater over it. If the resulting zest is fluffy and dry, your grater is fine. But if the zest forms a wet, oily paste, it's time for a new grater.

- Cooke Illustration, 2018

How To Clean Your Microplane

1. Wash it right away. While you're still cooking, before the food has a chance to dry/burn onto the blades. Otherwise, you'll be stuck with those nasty protein-on-bits of grime.
2. How do you wash it? Soak in warm/hot water for a few minutes, while the rest of your dishes. Rinse off with a soapy sponge in the direction of the blades.
3. Always fully dry it and store in the plastic protective cover. That's for two reasons: to reduce drying and to reduce oxidizing during your flight!
4. Finally, some foods will calc (like tomatoes) so consider having one for messy fresh garlic, tomatoes, onions and one for chocolate and other bitter ingredients. (Food 5, 2018)
